The Standing Committee on Justice, Law and Human Rights has commenced its review on the Anti-Doping Bill (Bill No. 1 of 2024), Child Justice Bill (Bill No. 4 of 2024), Child Care and Protection Bill (Bill No. 5 of 2024) and Natural Disaster and Risk Management Bill (Bill No. 6 of 2024).

The Anti-Doping Bill 2024 ('Bill') seeks to establish a national anti-doping organisation namely the Drug-Free Sport Fiji for the purpose of implementing and coordinating anti-doping activities in Fiji effectively. [Bill-No-1-Anti-Doping-Bill-2024.pdf | parliament.gov.fj]

The Child Justice Bill 2024 ('Bill'), seeks to repeal the provisions of the Act that deal with children in conflict with the law (formerly known as juveniles). The Bill provides a more comprehensive framework for the special treatment of children at all stages of the child justice process, from the point of their initial contact with the police through to trial, rehabilitation and reintegration into the community and to their families. [Bill-No-4-Child-Justice-Bill-2024.pdf | parliament.gov.fj]

The Child Care and Protection 2024 ('Bill') replaces the child protection sections of the Juveniles Act 1973 ('Act'). It outlines what the country will do to promote the wellbeing of children and to protect them from all forms of violence, abuse, neglect and exploitation. The intention of the Child Care and Protection Bill is to provide a more comprehensive framework for child welfare services, and in particular to better guide the work of the Ministry responsible for child welfare ('Ministry') in preventing and responding to child abuse. [Bill-No-5-Child-Care-and-Protection-Bill-2024.pdf | parliament.gov.fj]

PACIFIC NETWORK ON GLOBALISATION

'Fiji Does Not Need PACER Plus'

FREDERICA ELBOURNE
SUVA

Fiji does not need Pacific Agreement on Closer Economic Relations (PACER Plus), as it does not bring in new money, says Pacific Network on Globalisation (PANG).

It remained to be seen how becoming a party to PACER-Plus would resolve the more pressing issues that Fiji was seeking to address, like economic diversification, domestic value-addition, industrialisation, labour, shore-based trade, PANG deputy co-ordinator, Adam Wolfenden said.

"Any decision by Fiji, or any other non-PACER-Plus party should be done with full transparency and consultation with communities, in conjunction with a robust and independent assessment of both the benefits and costs, as well as a social impact assessment," Mr Wolfenden he said from Australia last night.

"Fiji already has duty-free quota-free market access to Australia and New Zealand, so, many of the obligations in the agreement will require Fiji to open up to Australian and New Zealand imports or service providers.

"If Fiji wants to do such things, it can do so unilaterally whenever it deems right, it does not need PACER-Plus to do so."

The so-called 'pro-development' aspects of PACER-Plus were the labour mobility and development assistance arrangements.

"Fiji has labour mobility access to Australia and New Zealand, and the development assistance funding was coming from existing budget allocations, so there was no new money involved," Mr Wolfenden said.

The aim of PACER-Plus was to create an enforceable agreement about what economic levers Fiji could and could not pull, he said.

"This aims to reduce the taxes on imports - which impacts government revenues and local producers - and make foreign investors be treated the same as domestic investors or service providers," Mr Wolfenden said.

"It may mean, Fiji's ability to ensure that the benefits of investments are maximised for Fijians, are limited."
